

Georgia Tech Academic Honor Code

The Georgia Tech Language Institute follows the Georgia Tech Academic Honor Code. In simple terms, this means students should not engage in dishonest actions.

Dishonest actions include the following:

- Copying another person's work and claiming that it is your own on in-class or out-of-class assignments.
- Receiving improper help on assignments from another person.

Students who violate the Academic Honor Code will receive a "0" on the assignment in which they committed the violation. Their teacher will discuss the violation with them and provide guidance on how to avoid this violation in the future. Teachers will also officially document the violation by e-mailing the Director or Assistant Director about the incident. Repeated violations by the same student may result in failure in the course or dismissal from the program.
